COOLIDGE ORDERS RABBI ARRESTED

RABBI ASKS FOR CASH AND IS ARRESTED

Jewish Pastor Says He Organized Elders to Oppose Ku Klux Klan Organization
SAYS COIN USED IN CAMPAIGN
Further Examination of Coolidge "Annoyer" Set For Monday in New York Court

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, March 10.—Rabbi E. B. M. Browne, charged with sending annoying letters to Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Frank Stearns, wife of the secretary to the President, was paroled for further hearing on Monday by Magistrate Andrews this afternoon.

Rabbi Browne, who is head of the American Jewish Seventy Elders and pastor of Temple Zion in the Bronx, was arrested on complaint of Calvin Coolidge. Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Stearns on a charge of annoying the President's family. He is 72 years old.

LETTERS DEMAND COIN

It is charged that the rabbi inflicted upon the complainants an avalanche of letters demanding he be reimbursed for half of $25,000 he asserts the American Jewish seventy elders spent in campaigning for President Coolidge last fall.

Rabbi Browne was arrested by secret service agents and arraigned in New Yorkville court.

When the rabbi produced apparently authentic letters from former Presidents, McKinley, Harrison, Roosevelt and Harding he was paroled in his own custody, without bail, for examination next Monday.

The secret service agents testified that Coolidge and Stearns had received a great number of letters from Rabbi Browne demanding that they pay him $12,500 and that they had replied to many of these letters.

GRANT PALLBEARER

Rabbi Browne claimed he was the only surviving pallbearer at the funeral of President Grant and that he had once employed the late President Harding as a private secretary. In 1888, he said, Harding had just taken over the Marion Star and the rabbi, who was supporting Benjamin Harrison, brought the Ohioan to New York as his secretary during the campaign. He exhibited a letter signed with President Harding's name, congratulating him upon his birthday and recalling "old times."

OFFERED FOREIGN JOB

Dr. Browne told the magistrate that he organized the Seventy Elders in opposition to the Ku Klux Klan, and that President Coolidge had written him that he would refer the matter to the finance committee. He said he had been offered the post of ambassador to Turkey, which he declined.

Woman Dismissed at Sanity Hearing

Superior Judge H. V. Alvarado yesterday afternoon determined that because one throws rocks at neighbors' children the rock thrower is not necessarily insane. The court dismissed an insanity charge made against Clara Moltoza, of San Pablo, 30, by A. F. Cosa, who accused her of throwing rocks at neighbors' children. Officers who investigated the case declared that Mrs. Moltoza, who is a mute, threw the rocks when she was tormented and that she had become aggravated over a fancied grievance.

Washington to Cause Arrest of Girls That Drink in Public

(By FRASER EDWARDS
(By Universal Service))

WASHINGTON, March 10.—High flying Washington society that strata which is always in search of a thrill—is about due for a real jolt.

Dainty debutantes, who get a "kick" out of life by dancing and sipping anti-Volssteadian beverages in the capital's swanky cafes, may soon wind up their evening with a new sensation—a patrol ride in the direction of police headquarters.

For the word has gone out from Harry N. Luckett, head of the district prohibition forces, that women drunks in Washington are no longer to be immune from arrest. They are to be arrested on "drinking in public" charges he announced.

At his wife's end to find a means of stopping public drinking in Washington, Luckett discovered that the Sheppard law, providing local prohibition for the National Capital, made it illegal to tilt a glass of liquor in public, no matter who provided the drink.

Luckett is now recruiting a corps of "sheik" dry sleuths, and chic policewomen, who will don evening clothes and mingle with the merry-makers and carry out the new anti-drinking order. Mrs. Van Winkle, head of the local woman's bureau of the police department, will furnish the feminine gendarmes.

Mrs. Van Winkle, it was recalled, created a sensation several years ago by making a personal arrest of a couple who were taking a drink in a leading hotel.

Discussing his new crusade, Luckett said:

"We are after big game. We are no respecters of persons. We would prefer to nab a so-called society man and a debutante than a shoe clerk and a cash girl. It would get more publicity and therefore have a wholesome effect on law violators.

Women do not carry liquor in hip pocket flasks and therefore we have been unable to get them for possession. For some reason the Volstead law omitted a drinking in public provision. But we can get them under the Sheppard law here in Washington and we are going to do it."

MR. AND MRS. FLOYD A. ROSS, NOTED EVANGELISTS COMING TO RICHMOND

Richmond First Christian Church is to have the Ross Evangelistic Company conducting services for them for two or three weeks beginning next Sunday, March 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd A. Ross are both very musical and along with their preaching, which is said to be exceedingly fine, they put on fifteen minute concerts every evening. They have been blessed with unusual crowds everywhere they have gone and always leave the church stronger and the community better.

The pastor, Frank A. Woten, is delighted to know these people are coming to Richmond. Evangelist Ross is reputed to be a very strong preacher and speaks in no uncertain terms but calls black, black and white, white.

They will arrive in Richmond next Saturday. They have already been scheduled to put on musical programs at several club luncheons and lodges next week.

President in Quandary Over Rejection of His Nominee

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Rejection by the senate of the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren to be Attorney General caused considerable speculation tonight as to what action will now be taken by President Coolidge to complete his cabinet.

The President was understood to have been so confident that the senate would confirm Warren's nomination that he has no other candidate in mind for the place.

Despite the senate's action there is nothing in the law to prevent the President from giving Warren a recess appointment after the senate adjourns its special session. In that event, the nomination would have to be resubmitted to the senate when it convenes.

Although there is ample precedent for the renaming of a rejected appointee, it was believed in well-informed circles tonight that the President will now turn to other candidates for an attorney general.

Among those considered before the selection of Warren, were James M. Beck, Solicitor General; Curtis D. Wilbur, now Secretary of the Navy; and Judge Arthur P. Rugg of Massachusetts, a close personal friend of the President.

A program calling for adjournment of the extra session of the Senate by Saturday night, tentatively agreed to by Senate leaders today, appeared tonight to have been upset by the Senate's rejection of Charles Beecher Warren's nomination to be Attorney General.

It is probable that the Senate will remain in session until a nomination for the Attorney-Generalship has been favorably acted upon. The possibility that President Coolidge will defer action several days, and that his selection may lead to another protracted debate, making it impossible for leaders to say how long the present session may last.

COOLIDGE'S NOMINEE IS TURNED DOWN

Charles Beecher Warren, Nominated for Attorney-General, Rejected by Senators
EMPLOYED BY SUGAR TRUST
Bitter Attack on Warren's Alleged Sugar Record Led by Reed and Walsh

(By FRANKLIN WIDNER
(By Universal Service))

WASHINGTON, March 10.—President Coolidge's nomination of Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan to be Attorney-General in his Cabinet was rejected by the Senate today by a vote of 41 to 39.

The first vote was a tie, 40 Senators voting to confirm the nomination and 40 voting in the opposition. Vice-President Dawes was absent from the Senate and Senator Moses occupied the chair.

Before the vote was announced, Senator Reed of Pennsylvania charged to the negative in order to move for reconsideration.

SECOND MOVE DEFEATED

Immediately Senator Walsh of Montana, leader of the opposition to Warren, moved to lay Read's motion on the table. The roll call on this motion was ordered and administration leaders hurriedly sent out a call for Vice-President Dawes in the hope of getting him to the Senate in time to break the deadlock.

But the vote on Walsh's motion was just the same as the vote on the original motion to confirm Warren. The Republican leaders were unable to find Dawes and the roll call was finished without his presence in the chair.

The Reed motion to reconsider was laid on the table by 41 to 39.

BASED ON SUGAR RECORD

The opposition to Warren centers about his connection several years ago with the Michigan Sugar company and alleged relations with the so-called sugar trust.

Administration officials were of the opinion that his high abilities as a lawyer, which were proven in his handling of the relations between the United States and Mexico, and later as Ambassador to Mexico, would overcome the opposition to him on this score.

The prominence given him in Cleveland convention, which nominated Coolidge and Dawes when he was made chairman of the platform committee at President Coolidge's personal direction, was also looked upon as a factor which might soften the attitude of opposition Senators.

But the opposition grew stronger during the hearings before the Senate Judiciary committee and when the Senate voted to confirm Harlan F. Stone, former Attorney-General, for the Supreme Court, it was generally understood that the fight on Warren would be kept up to the finish.

DAY OF BITTER DEBATE

The vote was taken after a day of bitter debate in which Senators Reed of Missouri and Walsh of Montana led the attack. Both delivered speeches directing attention to Warren's sugar record. Walsh read numerous letters which were exchanged between Warren and H. O. Havemeyer, head of the sugar trust, in which the former outlined steps which were being taken to assimilate the smaller sugar companies.

Reed declared in the course of his speech that "a man with such a

Change in State Fair Date Urged by San Francisco

(By Universal Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—A change in the date of the State Fair at Sacramento this year will be urged before the State Agricultural Society tomorrow (Thursday) by a committee representing San Francisco's Diamond Jubilee celebration.

September 5th to September 12th, the date set for San Francisco's state fair, conflicts with the customary date of the State Fair. A number of methods of avoiding the conflict in dates have been advanced. A decision will be reached at tomorrow's conference of the San Francisco Citizens' Committee and the directors of the Agricultural Society. It is expected that the scheduled date of the State Fair will be advanced a week.

NEW CHURCH HOME PLANNED BY BAPTISTS

The First Baptist church of Richmond is to begin construction within a few weeks of a new $50,000 edifice on the southwest corner of Thirteenth street and Barrett avenue, according to announcement made yesterday.

The site has already been secured and paid for, and a financial drive has progressed to such an extent that actual construction is expected to get under way this summer, according to Rev. C. R. G. Poole.

Members of the First Baptist church who are serving on a committee appointed to raise the necessary funds are: C. E. Parker, Carl Longacre, F. S. French, E. A. Baker, C. W. Cook and Dr. W. W. Fraser.

Inquiries Pouring in for Re-Drafted Bath House Plans

A large number of inquiries have already come forth concerning the re-drafted plans for the Richmond municipal bath house, re-drawn to come within the $85,000 bond issue, which were presented to the city council at the meeting on Monday night, according to reports coming from the city clerk's office yesterday.

The inquiries are reported to come from numerous local contractors as well as from a good many concerns outside the city. In view of the fact that so many inquiries have already come in it is expected that the competition to secure the contract for the construction of the bathhouse will be very keen in all departments of construction.

Plans for the new building may be looked over in the office of City Clerk A. C. Paris, City Engineer E. A. Hoffman, and Architect James A. Narbett.

INQUEST HELD IN ACCIDENTAL MOTOR CRASH

The verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of Joseph Edward Allen, who was killed when his machine turned over on Tunnel road, January 29, was "Shock from concussion of the brain and fractured spine due to accidental overturning of the automobile which he was driving."

This verdict was returned at the inquest held at Walnut Creek last night by Coroner C. F. Donnelly.

It has been impossible to hold an inquest before as the only two witnesses, Warren Allen, brother of the deceased, and E. Gerow, an uncle, have been in the hospital with injuries sustained in the wreck.

According to the stories told by these two men they were coming along at a moderate rate of speed about 1 a. m. bound home from Linda Park, when suddenly three men stepped out in the road in front of them. As the car slowed down one of the men in the road threw something which broke the windshield.

They did not see the men throw however, but both are sure that at that time the windshield broke in some mysterious manner. After that they remember no further.

AUTO HITS STREET CAR

A slight accident occurred last evening when an auto driven by John Cuthbert of 138 First street, struck a street car at the corner of Sixteenth and Macdonald while he was attempting to make a turn at the intersection. The car a Star touring, was badly smashed but no injuries were sustained by the occupant.

Sudden Death of William S. Banner

William S. Banner, husband of Martha Banner of 129 Eddy street, Point Richmond, died suddenly of heart disease while at work at the Standard Oil company yesterday.

The deceased was 50 years of age and had been a resident of Richmond for the past ten years, during which time he became very well known here and will be mourned by a wide circle of friends.

Banner had been having trouble with his heart for several months but his condition was not believed serious.

The remains are at the Wilson and Kratzer funeral parlors, from where the funeral services will be held, but the date has not yet been set.

Training Camp Quota Increase Provision Made

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Recent action of Congress in increasing the appropriation for citizens' Military Training Camps will permit the training of between 35,000 and 50,000 young men at the camps next summer, it was stated today.

The appropriation this year is $2,807,471 as compared with $2,330,000 last year. The quota for last summer's camps was 28,000, but training actually was given to 32,785.

The sum provided this year is for a quota of 35,000, but corps area commanders have been instructed to obtain 50,000 applications, and it is anticipated that approximately 40,000 will be accepted. On February 28, 5,558 applications had been reported to the war department. On the same day last year, only 3,975 had been received.

Qualifications for enrollment in the "Blue" course, the highest that is given, have been changed by a recent order, it was made known today. Civilians without previous military service may be admitted, provided they fulfill certain educational and personal qualifications and signify their intention of enlisting for a year in the regular army, National Guard or enlisted reserve corps and of pursuing a course of study to fit them for reserve commissions.

JUSTICE COURT FINES

According to the monthly report of Justice John Roth, fines were collected to the amount of $167.50 during February.

Official Paper Of The City Of Richmond, California

WHY I BELIEVE IN RICHMOND AND THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

BY E. P. VAUGHAN,
Reactor and Notary

A city without a Chamber of Commerce can hardly be regarded as a city nowadays—it is, as a rule, just a smug, self-satisfied town. Richmond, until the past year, was something like that—only there were so many factions, and so much pulling at cross purposes, that it could hardly be termed self-satisfied.

The organization of a real Chamber of Commerce in 1924 was the best thing that has happened to Richmond in its history. Harmony amongst its people is being established, and most of our people are really beginning to believe that we CAN have a city here.

As to being a member of the Chamber of Commerce, it is a privilege, and it is good business. Anyone who expects to continue to live in Richmond must realize that his success in material things depends upon the future growth of the City. Naturally, a large and enthusiastic membership in the Chamber of Commerce will hasten that growth, therefore it is good business to belong and poor business not to belong. By helping with our membership and co-operation, we are helping to boost the City, and thus helping ourselves. Incidentally, we are also helping others, which we are somewhere commanded to do.

RAISING COMMUNITY FUNDS

The community chest, one of the valuable inheritances left us by the war, is in the way of becoming a permanent American institution, it is disclosed by an inquiry conducted by the civic development department of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

This systematic method of financing social and charitable agencies, which was almost unknown in pre-war days, appeared in martial guise during the war as a "war-chest," but unlike most things growing out of the war, it has developed, rather than declined, with the advent of peace.

The civic development department of the national chamber finds that of the 136 chests for which figures for 1924 have been obtained, 70 reached their goals and 66 did not. In 1923, out of a total of 144, 70 reached their goals and 74 did not.

Comparative figures for the two years, so far as they are available, show a gradual increase in these community funds.

Fifty-six received an increased amount over that received in 1923; 34 received a decreased amount over that received in 1923. Fifty-two increased their contributors in 1924; 32 decreased their contributors in 1924.

Twenty-five reported first campaigns in 1923; 20 reported first campaigns in 1924.

INTERNATIONAL AIR LINES

In the establishment of air lines, upon which a regular airplane service is maintained, European countries are fast outstripping the United States. This is disclosed by a survey made by the committee on international commercial aviation of the international chamber of commerce.

Of lines actually functioning or to be established this year, Germany has 15; France, 10; Great Britain, 5; Holland, 3; Australia, 2. The United States, Belgium and Russia are on a par with one line each. The American line is the transcontinental mail line from New York to San Francisco. In many cases the European lines are interlocking. As a rule the lines are developed by private companies with government subsidies.

Virtually all the important German cities are not only interconnected by air but with other European capitals and industrial centers. It is possible to go by aeroplane from Germany to Copenhagen, London, Amsterdam, Smolensk and Moscow, Stockholm and Helsingfors, Warsaw, Cracow, Budapest, Zurich and Geneva.

The lone Russian line, maintained by the state, connects Moscow with Karkov, Rostov and Batum.

The French lines, also subsidized, connect with London, Prague, Warsaw, Malaga, Tangier, Casablanca, Rabat, Fez, Antibes and Ajaccio.

THE WEAK SPOT IN ENFORCEMENT

The weak spot in most efforts to enforce the anti-liquor laws is the leniency of public opinion toward the violation of dry edicts. Violation of the law, to many, is a joke—but if we but peruse the daily papers with serious thought and not the number of automobile accidents caused by intoxicated drivers, we will realize that from this cause, if none other, this is no joking matter. However much we may favor a man's freedom to imbibe, even to his own harm, we cannot grant him the right to endanger the lives of others.

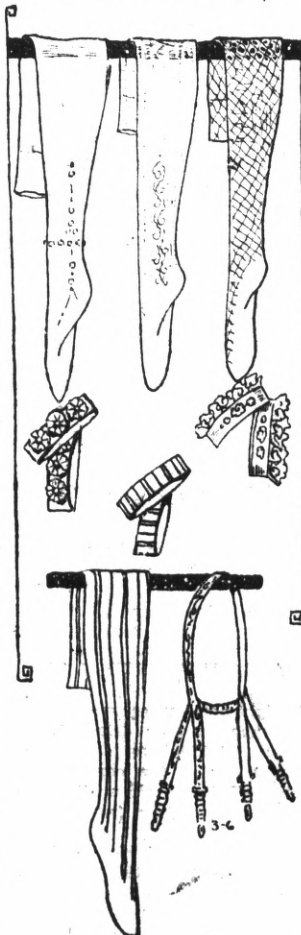

SCHOOL DAYS By DWIG

DRESS By MARY MARSHALL

Stockings Play a Leading Role in the Making of a Well-dressed Woman's Wardrobe

NEVER have stockings been more important than they are at the present time. Stockings, shoes, and gloves—out especially stockings—are and will be so important, in the opinion of keen observers, that the woman who dresses in a small allowance is going to have a hard time of it trying to save enough money wherewith to buy frocks and wraps and hats. You simply can't look well dressed without being well shod and well stockinged. This demands stockings that are of good material, and that are of design and tint suited to the frock with which they are worn. They must fit perfectly, which of course means that they must be well held up by garters or hose supporters. The custom of rolling stockings at the knees is one of the flapperish tricks that is wanting. It did perhaps seem rather devilish to begin with, but rolled stockings never leaked so trim as those that were supported in some other way. Hence the present vogue for garters. There are now hose supporters hanging from a belt for the woman who doesn't

WISE AND OTHERWISE By MARY MARSHALL

A LITTLE HAIR WISDOM

BRUSHING the hair thoroughly and giving it plenty of air are two very good ways of keeping it in good condition. And as winter weather comes around, remember this theory of giving the hair air. Let it hang loosely about the shoulders while you sit in an open window whenever you can. When you wash it, dry it in the open air. Give it a sun bath from time to time. You will find this treatment of utmost benefit to the hair.

A GOOD VEGETABLE SALAD

One of the tea rooms in a big city makes a specialty of this vegetable salad: 1. Three as a foundation. In one lettuce cup a big spoonful of potato salad mixed with mayonnaise; in another a pile of sliced pickled beets. Then a slice of tomato, a spoonful of string beans, and two stalks of asparagus. The whole is dressed with French dressing.

WHEN YOU BUY NEW LINEN

It is a good plan to mark all bed linen with the date of its purchase. You can either do this in indelible ink, or else you can cross-stitch the date on it. Or, with less work, you can mark the linen with a note book kept in the linen closet put the key X means April 1, 1925. Two Xs mean July, 1924. Three mean linen on hand before that date. Or some such system of symbols used to indicate different dates.

FOOL'S CAP PAPER

This term does not, as it would appear, come from the cap with which a sheet of foolscap may be made into a dunce's cap such as was used by the oldtime school teacher for punishment. It is a corruption of the Italian "foglio capo", meaning a full-sized sheet of paper.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

Copyright, 1917, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

SYNOPSIS

Pierrot, the trapper, received word that McTaggart, the factor, would arrive at Pierrot's cabin the next day to demand the hand of his daughter, Nepeese. "He is a beast—a man-devil," Pierrot warned Nepeese. Baree, the wolf-dog, hunting near McTaggart's camp, was caught in one of the game snares laid by the factor. McTaggart, finding him lying, brushed up like an Indian papoose, cried, "You little devil! I ought to beat your brains out—and I believe I will!"

The stick fell. It fell again and again, and when McTaggart was done, Baree lay half stunned, his eyes partly closed by the blows, and his mouth bleeding.

"That's the way to take the devil out of a wild dog," snarled McTaggart. "I guess you won't try the biting game again, eh, youngster? A thousand devils—but you went almost to the bone of this hand!"

He began washing the wound again. Baree's teeth had sunk deep, and there was a troubled look in the factor's face. It was July—a bad month for bites. From his kit he got a small flask of whiskey and turned a bit of the raw liquor on the wound, cursing Baree as it burned into his flesh.

Baree's half-shut eyes were fixed on him steadily. He knew that at last he had met the deadliest of all his enemies. And yet he was not afraid. The club in Bush McTaggart's hand had not killed his spirit. It had roused in him a hatred such as he had never known—not even when he was fighting Oohomiseew, the outlaw owl. The vengeful animosity of the wolf was burning in him now, along with the savage courage of the dog. He did not flinch when McTaggart approached him again. He made an effort to raise himself, that he might spring at this man-monster. In the effort, swaddled up as he was in the blanket, he rolled over on a helpless and ludicrous heap.

They began to journey before the sun was up, for if Baree's blood was almost dead within him, Bush McTaggart was scorched by his body with the heat of his anticipation. He made his last plans as he walked. He would go to the forest with Baree under his arm. He would send Pierrot at once for Father Grotn at the Mission seventy miles to the west. He would marry Nepeese—yes, marry her! That would tickle Pierrot. And he would be alone with Nepeese while Pierrot was gone for the missioner.

This thought flamed McTaggart's blood like strong whiskey. There was no thought in his hot and unreasoning brain of what Nepeese might say—or of what she might think. He was not after the soul of her. His hand clenched, and he laughed harshly as there flashed on him for an instant the thought that Pierrot would not want to give her up. Pierrot! Bah! It would not be the first time he had killed a man—or the second.

McTaggart laughed again, and he walked the faster. There was no chance of his losing—no chance for Nepeese to get away from him. He—Bush McTaggart—was lord of this wilderness, master of its people, arbiter of their destinies. He was power—and the law.

The sun was well up when Pierrot, standing in front of his cabin with Nepeese, pointed to a rise in the trail three or four hundred yards away, over which McTaggart had just appeared.

"He is coming."

With a face which had aged since last night he looked at Nepeese. Again he saw the dark glow in her eyes and the deepening red of her parted lips, and his heart was sick again with dread. Was it possible—

She turned on him, her eyes shining, her voice trembling.

"Remember, Nootawe—you must send him to me for his answer," she cried quickly, and she darted into the cabin. With a cold, gray face Pierrot faced Bush McTaggart.

INSTALMENT TWELVE

CHAPTER XIII

From the window, her face screened by the folds of the curtain which she had made for it, the Willow saw what happened outside. She was not smiling now. She was breathing quickly, and her body was tense. Bush McTaggart paused not a dozen feet from the window and shook hands with Pierrot, her father. She heard McTaggart's coarse voice, his boisterous greeting, and then she saw him showing Pierrot what he carried under his arm. There came to her distinctly his explanation of how he had caught his captive in a rabbit-snare. He unwrapped the blanket. Nepeese gave a cry of amazement. In an instant she was out beside them. She did not look at McTaggart's red face, blazing in its joy and exultation.

"It is Baree!" she cried.

"She took the bundle from McTaggart and turned to Pierrot."

"Tell him that Baree belongs to me," she said.

On the floor of the cabin Nepeese dropped on her knees and finished unwrapping the blanket. She was not afraid of Baree. She had forgotten McTaggart. And then, as Baree rolled in a limp heap on the floor, she saw his half-closed eyes and the dry blood on his jaws, and the light left her face as swiftly as the sun is shadowed by a cloud.

"Baree," she cried softly. "Baree—Baree!"

She partly lifted him in her two hands. Baree's head sagged. His body was numb until he was powerless to move. His legs were without feeling. He could scarcely see. But he heard her voice! It was the same voice that had come to him that day he had felt the sting of the bullet, the voice that had pleaded with him under the rock!

The voice of the Willow thrilled Baree. It seemed to stir the sluggish blood in his veins, and he opened his eyes wider and saw again the wonderful stars that had glowed at him so softly the day of Wak-ayoo's death. One of the Willow's long braids fell over her shoulder, and he smelled again the sweet scent of her hair as her hand caressed him and her voice talked to him. Then she got up suddenly and left him, and he did not move while he waited for her. In a moment she was back with a basin of water and a cloth. Gently she washed the blood from his eyes and mouth. And still Baree made no move. He scarcely breathed. But Nepeese saw the little quivers that shot through his body when her hand touched him, like electric shocks.

"He beat you with a club," she was saying, her dark eyes within a foot of Baree's. "He beat you! That man-beast!"

There came an interruption. The door opened, and the man-beast stood looking down on them, a grin on his red face. Instantly Baree showed that he was alive. He sprang back from under the Willow's hand with a sudden snarl and faced McTaggart. The hair of his spine stood up like a brush; his fangs gleamed menacingly, and his eyes burned like living coals.

"There is a devil in him," said McTaggart. "He is wild—born of the wolf. You must be careful or he will take off a hand, ka sakahet!" It was the first time he had called her that lover's name in Cree—sweetheart! Her heart pounded. She bent her head for a moment over her clenched hands, and McTaggart—looking down on what he thought her confusion—laid his hand caressingly on her hair. From the door Pierrot had heard the word, and now he saw the caress, and he raised a hand as if to shut out the sight of a sacrilege.

"Mon Dieu!" he breathed.

In the next instant he had given a sharp cry of wonder that mingled with a sudden yell of pain from McTaggart. Like a flash Baree had darted across the floor and fastened his teeth in the factor's leg. They had bitten deep before McTaggart freed himself with a powerful kick. With an oath he snatched his revolver from its holster. The Willow was ahead of him. With a little cry she darted to Baree and caught him in her arms. As she looked up at McTaggart, her soft, bare throat was within a few inches of Baree's naked fangs. Her eyes blazed.

"You beat him!" she cried. "He hates you—hates you!"

"Let him go!" called Pierrot in an agony of fear.

"Mon Dieu! I say let him go, or he will tear the life from you!"

"He hates you—hates you—hates you!" the Willow was repeating over and over again into McTaggart's startled face. Then suddenly to her father, "No, he will not tear the life from me," she cried.

"See! It is Baree. Did I not tell you that? It is Baree! Is it not proof that he defended me?"

"From me!" gasped McTaggart, his face darkening.

Pierrot advanced and laid a hand on McTaggart's arm. He was smiling.

MOCK TRIAL IS HELD AT LIONS CLUB LUNCHEON

W. S. Pierce, well-known local attorney, displayed himself as an orator and a philosopher, when, as speaker of the day, he delivered before the members of the Lions club at their luncheon yesterday, a talk on a series of ideas concerning morals and religion which were warmly applauded by everyone present. Pierce is the leading orator of the club, having appeared in elocution contests against speakers from all parts of the state on several occasions.

The chairman of the day was Claude Clark and "Keech" Mylander and Bert Carter provided the selections for the occasion. Archie Winchells was taken into the club as a new member.

A half hour of amusement was provided by a mock trial in which Dan Reardon, manager of the California theatre, was defendant; A. L. Paulsen, judge; Emmett Smyth and Mose Mech, as prosecuting and defending attorneys respectively, and Chief of Police Dan Cox as bailiff.

Rheumatism Pains 'Are Now In Season

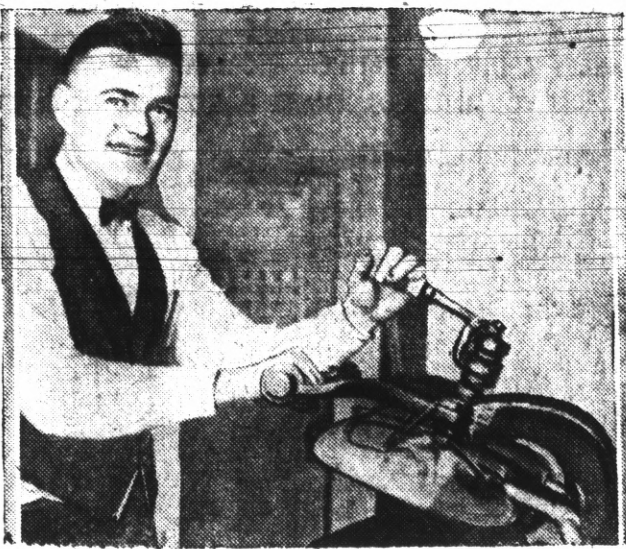

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

JIMMY O'CONNELL, "OUTLAWED" GIANT, IS MAKING HIS LIVING CREASING SAN FRANCISCO'S TROUSERS

O'Connell former New York Giant player was banished from organized baseball by Judge Landis following his investigation of an attempt to bribe Heinie Sand of Philadelphia just before the close of last season. After looking about for a means of making his living, O'Connell cast his lot with a San Francisco valet service. He is an all around worker, pressing suits when necessary, driving the delivery wagon or digging up business. The photograph shows O'Connell pressing clothes.

American Life in Stories Win Praise of Literary Critic

Stories of American life are winning the praise of critics of literature not only in the United States, but abroad. Writers have been seeking to capture the true spirit of this nation of one hundred and twenty millions of people, and some of them have succeeded. The translation of American novels to the screen has been accomplished with varying results, but no motion picture has been presented in the last 10 years that so surely portrays American life than "A Front Page Story," which will be shown at the Wesley M. E. Church Friday night.

The latest production of Jess Robbins, director of "Too Much Business" and "The Ladder Jinx," reveals a knowledge of rural life that few novelists have achieved. Each character in the story moves with remarkable humaneness across the screen; they are the people you know, the people with whom you must have rubbed elbows if you are an American.

The newspaper of a small community is its heart and its eyes and its ears and its voice. It has been the butt of jokesmiths for many decades and the country editor has been held up in mockery by his city brother, but throughout the history of story and jest concerning the country editor there can be found no scorn of him; because if one laughs at him one laughs at the symbol of ones self and one's community spirit.

Effort to Extend Time for Bridge Completion Fails

The Carquinez Straits bridge, the projected Golden Gate bridge and other structures proposed on San Francisco Bay must be completed within three years from the time construction is started it developed yesterday when the Assembly deadlocked on a bill to remove this restriction.

The bill by Assemblyman Robert B. McPherson of Vallejo, amending an old law on bridge building so that boards of supervisors may give contractors as much time as is needed in construction of large projects such as the Golden Gate and other proposed bridges on the San Francisco bay, met with opposition and threw the Assembly into a deadlock.

The old law provides that every bridge must be completed within three years from the time the bridge corporation is formed. Claiming that construction of the San Francisco bay spans would be impossible under this regulation, McPherson proposed to take the limit off altogether and leave the time element entirely in the discretion of the supervisors of the affected county.

Days of '65 Are Brought to Life in Richmond Film

Norma Talmadge's stage at the United Studios during the filming of "Secrets," which is now showing at the Richmond Theatre, looked as if dozens of pages from Harper's Weekly of 1865 had suddenly come to life.

Actresses in billowing crinolines, actors in short braided coats, huge stocks and ear-tickling collars, weaved about in the mazes of mid-Victorian sets while little girls in lace-trimmed pantalettes and short curls gave added color to the scene. It is a story of London and the American far west in the days just following the Civil War. The gowns and settings, provided respectively by Clare West and Art Director Stephen Gosson, are gorgeously colorful.

Other features on the same program include "Hot Stuff," a Spat Family comedy, and "Prizma," a screen magazine.

My Matrimonial Vacation

by VIOLET DARE

AUTHOR OF "The Half-Time Wife," "The Husband Tamer," "One Wife on Approval," etc.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

NANCY LABRABEE becomes a matrimonial free lance when her husband, a young army officer, is sent to the Philippines on foreign duty. Nancy stays home with her mother.

VIRGINIA, who uses the girl's charm and beauty to help get what she wants in the world of society. Their landlord.

FRANK HARRISON, falls in love with Nancy, who tries to transfer his attentions to her mother, who is never his age. She gets into difficulty there, as she also does when trying to straighten out the matrimonial tangles of her other friends.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XXIII—WHITE LIES

WHEN I got Mr. Jordan on the telephone and told him who I was, he was even more surprised than I'd expected.

VIOLET DARE

"Yes, that's exactly what I'm going to do," I told him. "I want you to give me some good advice."

"About your mother's investments?" he asked, his tone a bit colder.

"No, indeed—about a friend of mine and some affairs of the heart," I answered.

"Oh—that's more interesting." Come downtown at once, and I'll be waiting for you."

I couldn't help wondering what the people in his office thought. I was quite sure that the switchboard operator had listened in while we talked. No doubt she thought I was just another of his chorus girl friends, trying to get him to do something for me.

I was not using Frank Harrison's car that day—I never used it when I could help it! I took the subway downtown, and then took a taxi the few blocks to Mr. Jordan's office, so I wouldn't have a big taxi bill to pay. I wouldn't have taken a cab at all but I was afraid that he'd be waiting at the door for me.

That was exactly what he was doing. I paid the man in a hurry and ran across the sidewalk to the door of the office building.

"Why didn't you wait and let me pay the cab?" he asked as we shook hands.

"Oh, I like to be independent," I told him. That was true enough, though it's a luxury that I can't indulge in if much money is involved.

When he had ordered luncheon and had a cocktail, I began to tell him what I'd wanted to see him about. I didn't give any names, but told him of the predicament his own wife was in—that she didn't get on well with her husband, who went around with other women and didn't appreciate her, that she was on the verge of divorcing him, though she still cared for him, and marrying a young bouncer who would certainly take all her money and then leave her.

"And he may not even do that," I went on. "He may just involve her in some situation that makes it possible for him to blackmail her, and then make her pay him heavily, and go away. Of course, in a way that would be better, because if she married him she's sure to be unhappy, but she is such a lovely person that I feel that I must save her from the whole thing. Isn't there some way of doing it? Can't you help me?"

Now, he was like most men—the thought of beauty in distress appealed to him. If I had told him it was his own wife, he probably wouldn't have been so eager. But this unknown, beautiful woman brought out his sense of chivalry at once.

"If I were you, I'd let the young blackmailer involve her in this situation, and then let the husband know. Make him come to the rescue," he advised. "If he does still care for his wife, as you say he does, that will be enough for him."

"Oh, that's exactly the thing to do," I exclaimed. "Of course—how clever you are!"

He smiled delightedly, and I wondered for the hundredth time why a man like him should be so susceptible to flattery.

He urged me to go driving with him that afternoon, but I had other things in the air. I rushed home, and found Virginia having tea with Frank Harrison. They assured me that they'd been just waiting for me—that they'd thought I might like to go with them to the Zuloaga exhibition, later. That amused me—I wondered how long it would be before they would feel that they neededn't make excuses for being interested in each other.

I hated to face her.

Virginia looked lovely. Nobody would have suspected that she was the mother of a grown-up daughter like me.

"Frank is entertaining some friends from out of town this evening, Nancy," she told me, as she poured some tea for me. "You'll arrange to come, of course?"

"Oh, I'd love to, but—" I realized from her expression that no other engagement could be made an excuse. I fell back on a time-honored white lie, having myself for doing it, but telling myself that Nathalie Jordan's happiness must be saved even if I did get into trouble at home. "I feel so perfectly wretched—have such a headache—I'm sure I'd be no addition to any party."

"She does look very pale," Frank Harrison said. "Perhaps it would be better if she stayed home tonight and got a good rest."

I was grateful for that. But that evening, after they had gone, I slipped out, and joined Nathalie Jordan, Phil Leland and Nick at dinner. We went to the theater, and then to one of the night clubs.

And of course the first person I saw when I entered the club was Virginia. I hated to face her.

That is, the word must begin in the square that contains its identifying number, and extend as far as the white squares continue uninterruptedly.

An honest man's word

MORE than three hundred years ago, Miguel de Cervantes said: "An honest man's word is as good as his bond." Advertisers must be honest men, if they would remain advertisers. Their announcements are signed. They must tell the truth in their advertisements. For their own protection, as well as yours.

What would it profit a man to advertise "Pure, virgin-wool suits," only to have you discover they were shoddy? You would soon separate the sheep from the cotton. And you would never deal with that man again. And, further, you would tell all your acquaintances what a skinflint he was.

As a matter of business, if not of personal principle, an advertiser must tell the truth in his signed announcements. That's what makes the advertising columns of this paper such reliable guides to honest merchandise. The printed announcements are bonds between you and the advertiser.

Read the advertisements. Read them regularly. To be informed on the newest and best in everything. To save hours of shopping. To make the family purse do a bigger, better job. To goods of known quality at the most attractive price.

You would not plan a motor trip without first consulting road-maps and guide-books. Is it logical to plan a shopping trip without first consulting the advertisements? Read the advertisements. Then go to the stores with your mind more than half made up.

A signed advertisement is, in effect, a sealed bond between you and the advertiser.

Walter Hagen's Putting Ability Undergoes Slump

BY HERBERT REED.
Staff Correspondent Universal Service

TAMPA, (Fla.), March 9. Walter Hagen is unmistakably not the Hagen of old just at present. The same brilliancy of decision as to his strokes, the club to use in certain situations, the judgment of distance, the gauging of windage and all the rest of it, are still there, but the deadly putting has taken a vacation. And Hagen off his putting is not Hagen at all.

Walter has been famous throughout his career for his mastery of the mental hazard in golf; the size of the purse, the amount of the side bets, have never troubled him; he has perhaps even whipped up the fighting temperament somewhat. But there has been a different sort of mental hazard this winter.

That hazard has been Hagen's own interest in the West Coast of Florida, here is making his winter home, and here is where his heart is. He was plainly fussed and worried over the untimely rain, when he was deep in the engineering of the West Coast championship. With an unplayable course, due to heavy casual water, there was a postponement of a day and that day added gray hairs to Hagen's head.

It meant that some of the stars, Leo Diegal, for instance, were obliged to withdraw, because of other engagements, and while the tournament came through to a triumphant finish, Hagen was no great factor in it. There is no doubt that he felt it keenly.

Hagen is still a great golfer, but he will not be if he doesn't let others worry about running tournaments, and attend to his own putting, which right now is one of the saddest spectacles in the world of professional golf.

BERNARR MACFADDEN

Pains may arise in the abdomen from a variety of causes and their seat of origin may lie in the stomach, the small or large intestine, the peritoneum, liver, spleen, kidneys, or the genital organs in the pelvic cavity.

They may exist more or less permanently, becoming chronic, or they may occur in a violent and acute attack.

The intensity of abdominal pain is subject to considerable variation, ranging between the slight symptoms of a chronic tendency towards appendicitis to the intense agony experienced during the passage of a gall stone from the gall bladder.

Tenderness is indicative of inflammation. If superficial the muscular structures only are involved, if deep-seated and increased by continued pressure the internal organs are affected. Local enlargement of the abdomen is very frequent. If it is in the upper central portion, the stomach is usually affected. If it is upon the right side, the liver may be involved. If it is toward the groin, ovarian troubles, appendicitis or obstructions of the bowels may be the cause. If it is low down, the bladder or the womb may be involved. Enlargement of the abdomen may be due to inflammation of the bowels, womb, or peritoneum, or to kidney disease.

Fluctuation, with pains accompanied by a doughy feeling and general enlargement, points to dropsy. The treatment of these symptoms will depend largely upon the cause and nature of the difficulty, also whether the pains are chronic or acute in character. The treatment of abdominal pain caused by indigestion or constipation will be effective in nearly all difficulties of this nature. Naturally, however, if one is suffering from pains which come with symptoms associated with disease, it should be treated in accordance with the special treatment prescribed for such complaints. One can secure relief from abdominal pains in many instances by drinking as much hot water as possible. If this is flavored with a little salt it will sometimes be of advantage.

CORN FEED THEFT REPORTED

Junior High Team Defeats Nine of Sophomore Class

The unlimited baseball team of the Roosevelt Junior high school went over to the Union high diamond yesterday afternoon and gave the Sophomore nine from the latter school one of the nicest trouncings ever seen on the field. The final score was 12 to 4.

At the beginning of the fourth inning, the Union boys, were ahead 1 to 0, but at that time the Juniors began to lumber up and slammed the ball at will and all over the outfield.

As a result of the fine showing made by his men yesterday, Coach Miner of the winners, is confident that his cohorts will stage one of the most successful seasons this year that has yet been seen in the school. His pitching staff is especially proficient, and he hopes with his mound strength, to clean up all opposition in the field.

Relief

For pain—quick

The worst pains people suffer can be relieved at once. Rheumatic pain, soreness, backache, cold in chest, etc. Rub the sore spot with red pepper. Nothing else supplies such concentrated, such penetrating heat. And heat that doesn't hurt.

You feel it instantly. In three minutes that heat penetrates to the depths. Circulation starts, congestion is relieved. The pain and the soreness depart.

People used to use plasters, mustard and liniments. But modern science has found a better way, a quicker, more efficient way, a way without objections.

Don't suffer pains which Red Pepper Rub relieves almost at once. Don't let cold in the chest go neglected. Have this rub at hand—get it now. The time will come when its quick relief will mean much to someone in your home.

Red Pepper is saving millions of painful hours. Let it save them for you and yours.

PAULSEN'S TIPS!
In reciprocation of the wonderful cure effected through the medium of Dr. Wong Him's herbs and his thorough knowledge of every human ailment, I desire to state briefly the terrible sufferings experienced by myself for other thirty years, thus guiding anyone who may desire relief from attacks of any nature:

I had been afflicted with cancer and Bright's Disease, also catarrh of the head for a period of over thirty years. Learning of the extraordinary cures resulting from the herb treatments of Dr. Wong Him, I decided to seek relief. It was through this course, being to some extent skeptical, due to failures of other eminent specialists to effect any amount of relief.

A complete treatment of the above herbs have resulted in relieving me entirely of these affliction and my head has been cleared of all traces of catarrh. Pains in back and headaches have ceased and am again able to enjoy perfect health.

The above has been absolutely unsolicited and my only home is that same may prove of great benefit to all sufferers who may read it.

WEST ABSORBS TRAINLOAD OF NEW NASH CARS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 10.—The reality of prosperity over the Pacific Coast was given emphasis today when a trainload of automobiles which entered the state more than half a mile long reached San Francisco with only 15 cars and a caboose. Forty-one of the cars that had composed the original train had been diverted and sent in almost as many directions to meet demands too insistent to await the usual distribution from San Francisco.

Fifty-six carloads of automobiles consigned over the Southern Pacific to the Pacific Coast Motor Company were included in the train, which from engine to caboose made a rolling load 3240 feet long. The train carried 219 automobiles.

In the past solid trains of automobiles have come to San Francisco intact and the distribution made from here. Buyers wouldn't wait this time and the Southern Pacific cooperated with the Nash company to hasten deliveries by making distribution in carload lots.

Among the places to which cars diverted from this train were sent were: Weed, Sacramento, Stockton, Fresno, Ukiah, San Jose, Mt. View, Port Costa, Susanville, Richmond, Oroville, Reno, San Francisco, Corning, Eureka, Palo Alto, Modesto, Gilroy, Santa Cruz, Watsonville, Vallejo, Petaluma, Hayward, San Rafael, Redding and Napa.

GETTING A DRINK OF WATER ONE OF THE HARDEST "STUNTS"

ARMY FLYERS HAVE TO PERFORM IN WINTER TEST

To prove the ability of the pure suit group of the Army Air Service to operate in the most trying winter weather, aviators from Selfridge Field were ordered to Camp Skeel,

Oscoda, Mich. This photograph shows that Lieut. Wheeler found getting a drink of water a lot harder than going up into the clouds in the cold season. One of the other flyers had to chop a hole in the ice before Wheeler could get down and "inhale" a few mouthfuls. However, the lieutenant seems to have enjoyed the drink.

SUCCESSOR TO ARMY GENERAL IS NOMINATED

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The Senate Military Affairs Committee today made a favorable report on the nomination of Colonel James E. Fehet to succeed Brigadier-General William Mitchell, as assistant chief of the army air service.

Action was taken after Secretary of War Weeks, behind closed doors, explained in detail why General Mitchell was not reappointed to his post. While Senator Madisworth of New York, chairman of the committee, and the other members were reticent about discussing what took place in the executive session, it was learned that Weeks declared the release of Mitchell from his position as assistant chief was "necessary in the interest of army discipline."

Weeks said Mitchell had gone over the heads of War Department officials to testify before the House committee probing the air service, and had suggested a unified air service, "in conflict with the views held by army and navy officials."

Some of the committee members, it was said, indicated they share the views held by General Mitchell on the subject and the indications are that question will provoke an animated discussion in the floor when the Senate is called upon to ratify the nomination of Colonel Fehet.

General Mitchell will leave Washington tomorrow on leave of absence to visit his home at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, for a few days to look after private business interests there.

He has been given no indication as to where he will be stationed after March 26, when his term as assistant chief of the air service expires, nor has the war department invited him to express his wishes in the matter.

3 CAR LOADS OF NASH AUTOS RECEIVED HERE

Frank A. Scholes, 1427 Macdonald avenue, dealer in Nash, Overland and Willys-Knight automobiles, received three car loads of Nash cars Saturday, most of which had been contracted for before arrival. As an indication of how the closed car has grown in popular favor, all of the autos in the three cars were enclosed machines except one, which was a roadster.

"The unprecedented demand for Nash cars in the six months that have elapsed since the introduction of the new line leaves no doubt as to the manner in which they have been accepted by the public," says F. A. Scholes, sales manager of the Nash Motors Company. "In September for instance Nash Motors showed an increase of 7 per cent over the same month of the previous year while the industry as a whole showed a decrease of 13 per cent."

"Similar figures for the succeeding months are interesting. The Nash gain in October over the previous year was 54 per cent, the industry decrease being 23 per cent; in November, the Nash increase was 124.6 per cent with the industry's decrease of 21 per cent; then came December, always a 'low month' but again Nash made an increase, the figure this time being 22 per cent while the general industry recorded a decrease of 27 per cent; in January the Nash increase was 32 per cent as against the industry's decrease of 29 per cent, and, as related above, the February increase of 51 per cent made the month just ended the biggest month in the history of the Nash Motors company, regardless of the season and also notwithstanding that it was three days shorter than the best previous month in Nash history, October 1924."
